

Quantum Materials Spectroscopy Centre (QMSC)

Modern science and technology rely on materials whose usefulness depends on their electronic properties – that is, how they conduct or resist electric charges. Semiconductor materials, for examples, are the foundation for the world’s computer and telecommunications industries. The QMSC, a phase 3 beamline, will be used to design and explore novel complex materials for their potential in next-generation technologies.